Friends of the Earth Middle East

“Shoveling the Soil” is a national, Jewish-Arab partnership established in March 2009. The partnership aims to carry out a series of integrated projects that would bring about a real and sustainable change in the natural environment and the social-economic foundation of the region.

The partnership’s vision is based on the principles of coexistence and mutual respect, and its goals are to:

- Strengthen the environmental cooperation between the Jewish and Arab communities.
- Foster innovative solutions to environmental challenges.
- Promote sustainable development and social cohesion.

The partnership’s projects focus on areas such as water management, agriculture, and natural resources conservation. By working together, the Jewish and Arab communities are able to address environmental issues more effectively and to build a shared future.

The partnership is led by Friends of the Earth Middle East, a non-profit organization, and is supported by a group of partners, including the Jewish National Fund, the International Cooperation Administration of the European Union, and other international and local organizations.

The partnership’s achievements include the establishment of a joint farming project, the implementation of water conservation measures, and the promotion of sustainable agriculture practices.

The partnership’s success is a testament to the power of cooperation and the importance of addressing environmental challenges through a collaborative approach.
